

UNIVERSITY of NORTH CAROLINA

PEMBROKE

Assistant Professor of Emergency Management and Public Administration

The Department of Political Science and Public Administration at the University of North Carolina, Pembroke seeks an assistant professor of emergency management and public administration. This position will be responsible for teaching emergency management courses at the graduate level, courses in public administration at the graduate level, and at least one of our general education courses (American National Government or Introduction to Political Science).

The area of teaching and research specialization within emergency management is open. Preference will be given to candidates that are focused clearly on the administration side of the discipline, as opposed to a public policy scholar. Preferences will also be given to candidates that show how their research may connect and enhance emergency resiliency and preparation both regionally as well as in the local community. Successful candidates must show excellence in both online teaching as well as in the traditional classroom since this position will require the candidate to consistently teach in both learning platforms. The teaching load for this position is a 3-3, typically teaching two to three graduate course each semester and one undergraduate course each year.

To be considered for this position, candidates must hold a Ph.D. in public administration, emergency management, or a closely related field, or be ABD with a clear date of completion.

This position will be responsible for teaching emergency management courses at the graduate level, courses in public administration at the graduate level, and at least one of our general education courses (American National Government or Introduction to Political Science).
